TRIBUTE TO A FALLEN HERO

Before the annual meeting of the Marshalltown High School Alumni Association, June 17, 1918, C. H. E. Boardman paid a glowing tribute to Sergt. Frank Glick, of the United States Marines, the first Marshalltown boy to fall in battle. Mr. Boardman said:

"Fellow Members of the Marshalltown Alumni:

IT is indeed fitting that we pause at this time to lay on the altar of memory our tribute to the first of ours that has fallen in the great and final struggle twixt militarism and morality.

"We speak with a spirit of pride rather than sorrow. Sable garb is turned to gold, even as the glory of the sun, swift sinking in the western sky, gilds the evening shadows that creep on apace, and death is swallowed up in victory.

"The story of Frank Glick is truly typical of all that is best in America —yet so simple is the tale.

"In 1846 George Glick, Frank's paternal grandparent, emigrated to America from Germany. The German name was 'Gluck.' Germany was not then an empire. The Hohenzollern tribe was just beginning to fix its tentacles on the throne. George Glick was one of those American representatives of that race which we in America so long believed still lived 'neath the rule of the Kaiser. We are just now beginning to comprehend the vast difference made by education and environment.

"Here on the broad prairies of Iowa, that in themselves spelled freedom, Dr. Glick builded him a home, and helped lay the mud sills of Marshalltown. His eldest son was Albert G. Glick, whom we all loved to call 'Ab,' and 'Ab' was the charter alumnus of this organization.

" 'Ab' Glick married Nellie Abbott, also a Marshalltown girl and graduate, and of this union Frank was born.

"Nothing spectacular marked the progress of Frank through our schools. He was the fun-loving, high-spirited American boy, earnest in his studies, enthusiastic in his play, faithful in his work.

"War was the last thing that Frank probably thought of as he studied through the years—the last thing for which he thought of preparing.

"But while Frank was studying and playing and working from boyhood to man's estate, a monarch, gone mad with the lust of power, was silently preparing to assassinate a continent. While Frank was engaging in sports, the Hohenzollerns were practicing war, the only game they ever knew, which accounts for the dirty tactics of the Hun; for they never learned to be decent and fair even in boyhood. Mark you, the eternal handicap of America, the persistent advantage of the Hun, is that an American has to be a 'true sport,' and the German knows no 'rules of the game' save the law of might.

"Frank graduated; attended college; abandoned college because of his father's illness, and entered business, where success attended his efforts, while America dreamed on, nor heard the low mutterings of the on-coming storm.

"Then came the sinking of the Lusitania, the Mexican conspiracy, the sinking of the American ships sailing the American flag, peacefully sailing the open lanes of the ocean, the killing of American women and children, and, as their life breath bubbled up through the freezing waters,

German soldiers, under government orders, shot down their survivors in the life boats.

"Then, like a great Colossus, America stirred from her fatuous sleep, and began to play the part of a man in the arena of the world.

"Then came the eighth crusade, the greatest crusade the world has ever known, the exodus of the flower of our youth—not to save the tomb of the Saviour from the Saracen, but to preserve the civilization which was the fruit of the Saviour's teaching.

"In that crusade Frank became a true knight, a volunteer answering the call from the fire-ringed, blood-drenched hills of far-off France.

"As we look back, how quietly, and without ostentation, it was done. In May, 1917, Frank enlisted in the United States Marines, the highest type of soldiery this, or any other nation, has ever known. Months of drill and preparation followed, and on Feb. 13, 1917, Frank landed in France, and disappeared in the war cloud that hung low over all Europe.

"Through rifts of swirling smoke came occasional word from fields of battle, all cheerful, all sanguine, all Frank.

"Again the cloud lifted, and news came of recognition and advancement, and then the cloud closed down, and out of the murk of conflict and fierce fighting, came the flash that Frank was 'killed in action.' 'Killed in action,'—and the Hohenzollern family, with its six sons, is the only family in all Germany that has not had a funeral.

"All this story is so absurdly simple, because Frank made it so.

"There were no heroics in departing, because Frank went about the business of war as his other employment, quietly, carefully, methodically. It was commonplace with him. He could see no other course when his country required him, so, without murmur, complaint, or even mention, he laid aside his hopes, and his ambitions, his desires and his dreams, and cast into the scale of battle his life, his limb, and all that life held dear.

"Nor has he died in vain. Let us not even try to look beyond our immediate circle. Is there one of us but what walks a little straighter because Frank has 'made good?' Do not the Stars and Stripes seem a little brighter, and a little more beautiful, through the tears that tremble in our sight? How small and insignificant seem the little things that we have done, when word came of the supreme sacrifice that Frank had made. Did we not one and all resolve that from then on we had but one thought, one mission, one thing to strive for, and that was, to go on, and on, until the Hun was eliminated from the earth?

"We will read history. Frank has made history; and long after your name and mine will be but a mere memory, even among those who loved us best, the name of Frank Glick will stand blazoned on our banners, marked with a gold star.

" 'Somewhere in France,' close to the front, there is a grave, dug in soil hallowed by the blood of heroes. No stately monument marks the spot, and perchance only the winds murmur sobs and the waters more softly rush as cannons boom their requiem over our schoolmate's last habitation. But in the shrine of the soul the lamp of recollection burns, ever clear and steady, and his spirit will ever 'carry on.'

" 'As goes the sun-god in his chariot glorious,
When all his golden banners are unfurled—
So goes the soldier, fallen but victorious,
And leaves behind a twilight in the world.' "

FALLS 2000 FEET IN AEROPLANE

THRILLINC EXPERIENCE OF SERGT. HERBERT T. NEWCOMER

SERGT. HERBERT T. NEWCOMER

TO fall 2,000 feet while flying in an aeroplane in France and escape death was the remarkable experience of Sergt. Herbert T. Newcomer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Newcomer, of Marshalltown, attached to the Thirty-fifth Aerial Squadron. The accident occurred June 22, 1918, resulting in Sergeant Newcomer sustaining a fractured skull, and the pilot, Lieut. H. W. Stunkard, an aerial instructor, escaping with less serious injuries. The aeroplane was demolished.

Sergeant Newcomer, who was serving as a mechanic in the squadron, was being taught to pilot a machine by Lieutenant Stunkard. When 2,000 feet in the air the machine became unmanageable when one of the planes failed. The aeroplane, with its human cargo, came down in a spiral, Newcomer alighting on his head when it struck the ground. The sergeant's skull was fractured, while the lieutenant suffered fractures of the shoulder, one knee and several ribs.

Newcomer was a patient in French hospitals for about three months before he was permitted to return to America. He enlisted in the air service May 16, 1917, and arrived in France Aug. 21, the same year.

MARSHALL COUNTY WAR WORK

MARSHALL COUNTY was 100 per cent efficient in all of its war work at home. It was one of the eleven counties in Iowa which met its quota in the First Liberty Loan. It was one of the seventeen to meet its full quota in the Second Liberty Loan and in the Third and Fourth Loans, when Iowa was the first state over the top in the nation, Marshall County was among the first half dozen counties over the top in the state.

Marshall County purchased 115 per cent of its quota in war savings stamps when the nation at large purchased less than 50 per cent, and Marshall County gave 115 per cent of its quota to the seven welfare societies in the union war work drive.

To the Red Cross Marshall County always delivered its full quota, tendering its check in advance of the drive and raising twice and three times as much as was asked so as to have plenty of funds for the work of its local chapter, which ranked as a model for all other chapters, according to the judgment of the directors in Chicago. Marshall County owes its home service record to the well directed efforts of its County Council of Defense.

After war work had started at home and one Liberty Loan drive had been conducted, it was found there were to be as many separate organizations as there were drives, each expending more time and effort upon organization than upon the drive itself. Efficient business men in Marshalltown, executive heads of the largest local enterprises, themselves familiar with efficient business organization, accepted the leadership of the various home war activities and sitting around the directors' table in the First National Bank, reorganized the County Council of Defense into an efficient, powerful, military force for the conduct of all war work at home.

The chairman of the County Council of Defense, A. A. Moore; the county chairman of the Liberty Loan, C. C. St. Clair; the county chairman of the Red Cross, C. H. E. Boardman; the county chairman of war savings stamp sales, D. W. Norris; the county chairman of the union war work, R. W. McCreery; the county food administrator, L. C. Abbott, and the city fuel administrator, John I. Bell, were made a committee of county commanders of the County Council of Defense, to act as an executive committee for all drives and chief command of each drive being assumed by the commander assigned to that branch of the home service.

Each county commander was given a precinct captain for his branch of the war work in each voting precinct of the county, and these seven precinct captains were all admitted to the County Council of Defense to constitute the local Council of Defense for their precincts and to act as a permanent precinct committee for all drives, the precinct command being assumed in each drive by the captain for that branch of the service.

Marshalltown was divided by the intersection of Main and Center streets into four precincts, with a local Council of Defense and seven captains for each precinct. For the purpose of rapid and efficient canvassing each of the city precincts was then sub-divided into from five to six subdistricts and a committee of seven war workers or privates in the War Service League assigned permanently to that district to do the canvassing for all drives. These War Service League workers were not members of the County Council but when that body did meet every month in the east court room it filled the room with as representative a group as any county convention of a political party. Its sessions were businesslike and serious as most of the members had sons in the service. There was no oratory, no lost motion. The business men acting as county commanders were always ready with proposals and instructions for the work in hand and the precinct captains were there to co-operate with their leaders.

The County Council maintained a committee on loyalty and patriotic service, composed of its chairman, Mr. Moore; its secretary, Mr. F. G. Pierce, and C. H. E. Boardman, W. H. Arney, H. A. Kinnan, A. H. E. Matthews, W. B. Nason, J. L. Wylie, J. F. McMahon and C. E. Nickerson. This committee, known as the "slackers' court," reviewed all controversies between individuals and their local councils and invariably, without a single failure, induced objectors to come across for the contributions and purchases in the war drives according to a fair allotment.

All war funds were alloted to its citizens according to their ability to pay. Liberty Loans were allotted among the precincts upon the basis of assessed values of property; war stamps upon the basis of population; Red Cross and all welfare funds one-half upon the basis of property values and one-half upon the basis of population. Every citizen's assessable property was listed from the tax books, his income estimated by competent committees and each precinct quota in every drive was then allotted to its citizens as fairly in proportion to their ability to pay as committees of neighbors could distribute the war burden. So fairly was the work done that all of the later drives for bonds and stamps and Red Cross funds were conducted at polling places to which people went without being solicited to volunteer for the war as they would to vote for a president.

Marshall County's plan for war service organization was adopted in the later months of the war by many other counties which were unable to meet their quotas in the war fund drives in any other way. As soon as the armistice was signed the Council of Defense adjourned sine die.

RED CROSS ACTIVITIES

C. H. E. BOARDMAN

R. W. McCREERY

ANY attempt of a detailed report of the doings of the Marshall County Red Cross Chapter during the war period would extend this article beyond the limitations imposed.

The Marshall County Chapter was organized April 24, 1917, with twenty members. Its officers for the first year were A. A. Moore, chairman; H. S. Lawrence, treasurer, and Mrs. M. G. Ingalls, secretary. These served until Dec. 1, 1917, when the following officers were elected: A. A. Moore, chairman; H. S. Lawrence, treasurer, and W. H. Arney, secretary. In November, 1918, C. H. E. Boardman was elected chairman; H. S. Lawrence, treasurer, and C. R. Edmister, secretary.

The raising of funds and obtaining a membership was placed in charge of C. H. E. Boardman, who continued in that capacity until he became chairman in November, 1918, when L. A. Larson became chairman of the Membership Committee, and conducted the 1918 Christmas Roll Call Campaign.

At present there are 21,500 members in Marshall County Chapter, without counting soldiers and sailors in the service.

The total cash receipts from membership and the first war drive were $69,706.84. The total cash raised in the second war drive was $38,446.68, while the third membership drive produced $18,304.73. This gives a grand total of $126,458.25 in real money raised directly for war purposes. Outside donations and individual work of the chapter will increase this amount to $150,000.00.

The raising of funds, however, was but a small part of the actual war work of the Red Cross in Marshall County. The greater portion of Marshall County's contribution consisted of the work done by the women who faithfully, efficiently and persistently, day by day, labored at the rooms and in their homes, sewing and knitting, making surgical dressings, all for our soldiers and sailors over seas and in the camps. Words of appreciation fail; statistics mean so little. By actual count of known work, Marshall County shipped 352 boxes, made 11,935 hospital garments, produced 27,406 hospital supplies, knit 8,912 articles, made 209,392 surgical dressings, shipped 13,546 refugee garments, besides packing 14 boxes and 50 packages for refugee work. Christmas was made merry for the soldiers, packages were sent across seas, supplies were created, crated and shipped. Every requirement was more than met, and with promptness. Individual mention would only mean to catalog a long list. This branch of the service was at all times under the efficient management of Mrs. A. F. Balch.

Any article on Red Cross work in Marshall County that did not refer to A. A. Moore, would be indeed lacking. There is no one man in Marshall County who has devoted more personal attention and individual energy than has he. He was the directing and performing head of the organization during the entire period of the war and the success of the organization in all its endeavors speaks more potently than could volumes of what has been accomplished by him.

Marshall County maintained a "flu" hospital during the epidemic, at times with over fifty patients under its ministration. It co-operated with county and city officials and the checking of the scourge was due in no small degree to its efforts.

A canteen service was maintained at all trains for soldiers and sailors en route.

Its Civilian Relief and Home Service Section have responded with cash, comfort and assistance to all those in the service and those dependent upon them.

Marshall County has twenty-four branch chapters outside of Marshalltown—all alive, all working, and each a credit to its locality and to the organization.

No resident of Marshall County need speak with anything but pride of the work of the Marshall County Chapter in all departments of Red Cross activities—all done with a minimum of expense and a maximum of efficiency.

Best of all was the spirit of patriotism, loyalty and charity which was the inspiration of all during the dark days of the world's war, and which will live longer even than the memory of good deeds done.

MARSHALL COUNTY FOOD ADMINISTRATION

L. C. ABBOTT

THE United States Food Administration for Marshall County was inaugurated December 8, 1917, by the appointment of L. C. Abbott as administrator, and F. A. Moscrip as assistant administrator. Previous to these appointments a committee of conservation as part of the County Council of Defense had through sub-committees and otherwise urged war gardens and tillage of vacant lots with much success. Of this committee the two named administrators were members and when the Federal Food Administration organized the state were so appointed by State Food Administrator Deems.

The actual work and labor of the County Food Administration as a federal activity came with the rationing of wheat flour and the call for return of overstocks in the hands of consumers in February, 1918. Thenceforth the task was a daily one and continued to be so for the ensuing eighteen months. In May, 1917, Mr. Moscrip was made county administrator and the two administrators gave every afternoon of their full days to the work of their office. The city paid for clerical work for war activities and Miss Lou A. Vogel was appointed assistant county administrator by request of the county food administrators and had charge of the office of the food administration in the court house. E. H. Schilling, of State Center, also was appointed as assistant food administrator for the west end of the county. Both served faithfully until the dissolution of the office, about January 1, 1919.

The County Food Administration evolved a flour card carrying the ration of each person in the family and with the splendid co-operation of the patriotic retail dealers of the county, who adopted the card and pledged themselves to sell to no one not supplied with that credential, actually held the consumption of flour during the desperate months of scarcity down to the one and one-half pounds weekly as promulgated by Hoover. In this they had the general and most hearty support of the people of Marshall County. It was said authoritatively that Marshall County saved more flour than any other in the state. It gathered up several carloads of its overstock and shipped them to places of extreme scarcity. In this flour wholesalers co-operated willingly. Generally speaking the popular idea was to give every assistance. Some few persons were fined for the benefits of the Red Cross and the good of their souls, but the great mass of Marshall County saved food patriotically to win the war.

In the organization of the War Service League of the county, the food administration gladly became part and received every assistance from the extended council of defense. The administration was organized in every township of the county and did excellent and patriotic work in practically every instance. One member was dismissed from the chairmanship of his township for cause and another was replaced because of dilatory methods. But the township food chairmen were a fine body of willing men. As in the hog census taken they did their work with practical hard sense and appreciation of their duty.

No county in the state was better organized in food administration than Marshall or received more general and loyal support. When wheat became easier and certain restrictions were lifted, the sugar scarcity was acute. It will illustrate the completeness of the organization to relate that the flour card was changed by order to a sugar card and so accepted by the retailers and the consumers without delay and without question, and that none in Marshall County could by any means buy more than his two pounds per month of any dealer in the county.

For the most part the administration had the agreeable support and co-operation of the hotels and eating houses on meat and sugar rules and other federal restrictions placed upon these places. Indeed, while watchfulness was the order of the day, the general spirit of all the people, wholesalers, retailers, hotels, restaurants, drug stores and fountains, consumers and all who fell under the supervision of the food administration, was most excellent and patriotic. But one retailer was fined and his offense was recommitted through ignorance more than intent. No baker, restaurant, hotel and but few consumers were penalized.

MARSHALL COUNTY FUEL ADMINISTRATION

JOHN I. BELL

COUNCILMAN JOHN I. BELL was a man of many duties during the war period, serving as chairman of the Federal Fuel Board, under the direction of the County Council of Defense; chairman of the Department of Labor, United States Employment Service, and chairman of the United States Public Service Reserve, United States Department of Labor.

Mr. Bell became Marshall County Fuel Administrator in November, 1917, when the office was created. It was his duty to see that fuel prices were kept regular and that a good supply of fuel was always on hand, to prevent any serious shortage. This service he performed most satisfactorily and at all times had the hearty co-operation of the dealers. He worked under the direction of State Fuel Administrator Webster.

A close check was kept of all fuel stocks on hand, the sales, the prices received and the amount of coal received by dealers. Even when a serious shortage threatened, the office was so competently administered that there was no suffering from lack of fuel in this county.

The labor bureau was turned over to Mr. Bell about April 1, 1918. This office was under the direction of Urick and Metcalf, the state supervisors, and it still is active in securing employment for returned soldiers and sailors. It has been instrumental in placing in good jobs many men who had returned from training camps and from overseas.

WAR WORK OF COUNTY Y. M. C. A.

J. B. NORTHCOTT

THE Young Men's Christian Association in Marshalltown was built by the citizens of Marshall County to serve the interests of the men and boys. Ever since its erection it has been the purpose of those in charge to make the building a community center, bringing under its roof all the activities of the county it was possible to secure. While the Association must have members who pay a certain sum for the privileges of the Association, it has never been the policy of the officers in charge to restrict the use of the building to the membership. With this program in force the men and boys of Marshall County have been making this their headquarters.

At the outbreak of the war the program of the Y. M. C. A. was immediately shifted to such a place as to enable the officers and membership to give their time to help win the war. The building with all its equipment and the force of the Association was turned in this direction. Two men on the staff, Mr. Robert Davis and Mr. E. E. Micklewright, went to war. Mr. Davis joined the cavalry and Mr. Micklewright the medical division of the Engineers' Corps. Mr. Gilman, the physical director, left the services of the local Association and entered the service of the Army Y. M. C. A. at Camp Dodge.

The Association, so well equipped, became the center for many war activities. When the fund was raised for securing and giving watches and medals to Marshall County boys, the general secretary of the "Y," Mr. J. B. Northcott, was asked to handle the details of the work, working under a most efficient committee. It was the privilege of the "Y" staff to meet each contingent which went to camp. The secretaries met each group, saw to it that each man was provided with a watch and medal, that he was given advice as to the best way to act upon entry into camp and when the group entrained, went with the boys to their camps, taking with them supplies of writing material, reading matter, games, etc., to make the trip as pleasant as possible, and to break the strain due to leaving home for war.

Marshall County having the only "Y" in this immediate territory, the secretary of the local "Y," Mr. Northcott, was made district manager for all the campaigns raising money for the War Y. M. C. A. work. The territory included Marshall, Hardin, Butler, Franklin, Hamilton, Grundy and Wright counties. Between campaigns Mr. Northcott spent three months in Army "Y" service at Camp Dodge.

The "Y" officers assisted in every way possible in organizing and putting across all the war fund campaigns and left nothing undone in their power to help win the war. Now that the boys are returning, one secretary has been asked to give his time in assisting the boys and each man returning from service is being given a free membership for three months of privileges. Many other phases of the work could be mentioned but all that is necessary is to say that the Association through its members, officers, equipment and all that it had, did everything in its power to help back our boys at the front and at home to win the war.

FIGURES compiled from the records of the Exemption Board by Miss Agnes Swift, chief clerk, shows the total registration for the selective draft in Marshall County to have been 6,819. One hundred sixty registered men were transferred from other counties for examination by the local board. The total number inducted for service was 929. The number enlisting from the county at the local station was 234, with fifteen others entering the emergency fleet service. More than 1,485 men were examined by the local board for service.

Called Upon To Do His Bit In Siberia

LACEY GAYLORD GRAY

Far away in Omsk, Siberia, Lacey Gaylord Gray, son of Mrs. Susan W. White, of Marshalltown, was called upon to do his bit for his country during the World War. When the Bolshevists came into power, Gray was acting as agent for the International Harvester Company, at Omsk. The office and its private accounts were seized by the bolshevists, but Gray remained and did what little he could do to protect the interests of the firm.

Then it was that he was called upon by his government to do his bit, being appointed vice consul at Omsk. In this capacity he remained thruout the great war, looking after American interests when Bolshevists and Czecks battled for supremacy.

Consul Gray was the only consular officer at the final peace conference between Bolshevists and Czecks, before the Czecks took Omsk, and was one of the first to congratulate and support the new Siberian government when it came in.

Meanwhile Millar White, Consul Gray's half-brother, also a Marshalltown boy, was doing his bit in the United States marines.

ELDERKIN C. BOARDMAN

DESTROYED FOURTEEN U-BOATS

TO have served on a warship that captured or destroyed seventeen submarines was the experience of Elderkin C. Boardman, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. E. Boardman, of this city. Boardman's experience in chasing U-boats, laying mines and patroling British waters was replete with excitement and hazardous incidents as that of any man who faced the Hun soldiery from the first line trenches. Boardman was attached to the U. S. S. Shawmut, a mine layer and submarine destroyer, which had a complement of 350 officers and men. Writing to his father of his experiences Boardman said:

"We arrived 'over here' June 29, 1918. After a day's run aong the rocky coast of Scotland we pulled thru three sets of gates into a small harbor, and dropped the hook. The town of Cromarty lies at the mouth of this harbor, Moray Firth, which is a bay of the North Sea, on the east coast of Scotland, at the extreme north and south of the Orkney Islands.

"We went on our first mining expedition about three weeks later, carrying 340 mines, each containing 300 pounds of T. N. T. We were convoyed by ten English destroyers, a couple of dirigibles and some United States naval planes. There were nine mine layers and this was the largest mine laying expedition ever attempted. The English navy was amazed at such a tremendous project. In all, the mine layer carried 5,000 mines. We laid the mines from the three-mile limit of Norway, on a westerly course, to the Orkney Islands. After we had pushed off all the mines we dropped marker buoys, and then on the next trip we would go out to these buoys and start planting mines from these west.

"Terrible weather conditions prevailed in the North Sea, and on the first trip the fog was so thick we could not see anything. We could hear a plenty, though, because many of the mines went off as soon as the salt water melted away the last safety precaution.

"The destroyers beat it for home on this first expedition and we were left to our own resources. Twice during that night we almost collided with ships but got away clean.

"We made thirteen mine-laying trips and all contained exciting incidents, returning each time to Inverness, where Naval Base No. 18 is located. After one trip we went down to Newcastle-on-tyne, England, and went into dry dock for repairs and some big feeds. After one week there we came back to Invergordon and it certainly seemed dead.

"Well, without giving details, we have fourteen big stars painted on the head of our pilot, representing fourteen German submarines destroyed or captured, credited to the Shawmut.

"The survey ship came in yesterday and I understand we are going to have seventeen stars on our Thanksgiving menu — some Thanksgiving party."

Not only was the family 100 per cent in war service, but its representatives were in almost every branch of the service. Burgess was a first class petty officer at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, and Mrs. Burgess volunteered for Red Cross work. Burgess enlisted for service in the navy at the age of 46, after having served the government in securing enlistment for special mechanical branches in the army and navy.

NEAR DEATH IN NO MAN'S LAND

DWIGHT L. FRAZIER

ON July 22, 1918, Dwight L. Frazer, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Frazer, of Marshalltown, a "wireless scout" with Battery B, Tenth Field Artillery, miraculously escaped death, when a German shell killed or fatally wounded every member of a small advanced party, with the exception of Frazer. Writing to his parents of the incident, Frazer said:

"I am in a base hospital far from the front lines. I am not wounded; in fact, I don't know what is the matter with me. All I know is that I am so shaky I can hardly write or do anything else. They call it shell shock and exhaustion. There was a shell lit in a bunch of us and got all but me. It knocked me down but I was not rendered unconscious. I bandaged one of the fellows who had a bad wound in his back, got a stretcher and another man, and started for a first aid station, which was about two miles away. Whether or not I got there I don't know. The next thing I knew I was in an ambulance about fifteen miles from the front, and the fellow I started to carry was beside me, but he had been dead for some time. He was a B. C. detail man, and one of my best friends.

"Later, as I sat on the seat of the ambulance with the driver, going to a hospital train, Harry Gabelman and Wayne Cumming jumped on the side of the car. I was never so surprised in my life. I didn't have much time to talk to talk to them, but it seemed good to see them.

"I can' tell you just what part of the front I have been on, but have been into the worst of it, and can say that Sherman was a wise man. Don't worry about me, as I will be O. K. as soon as I can get a rest and a few square meals."

Frazer soon rejoined his company and served with the American army of occupation. After the entry into Germany he was taken ill with pneumonia and his recovery was considered doubtful. He recovered in due time, however, and returned to his command, serving with the American forces in France and Germany for a longer period than most men from this county, and participating in as much severe fighting, perhaps, as any one man in the expeditionary forces.

MARSHALL COUNTY HONOR MEDAL

MAKE THE WORLD SAFE FOR DEMOCRACY
HONOR MEDAL PRESENTED BY THE CITIZENS OF MARSHALL COUNTY IOWA
OUR LIBERTY WE VALUE
OUR RIGHTS WE WILL MAINTAIN

At the first call of the government men began to leave Marshall county for service. Until the draft went into effect the boys left singly or in small groups. The citizens of the county began to realize the boys were going to war and no public form of appreciation was being shown. A fund was raised to give the boys a banquet, but for many valid reasons this was found to be impracticable. A special committee was named to care for this matter. After considering many proposals it was decided to give each man going from the county something that could be secured only by real service. A suitable bronze medal, inscribed with the owner's name, together with a wrist watch, was given each man. This practice continued until the watches proved to be unfit and not worth the cost. The committee then decided to secure a medal which would cost the same amount as the former medal and watch. This was done and the cut of the medal is shown above. The purpose of the committee was to give each soldier and sailor in Marshall county this token of appreciation. Medals were given the Red Cross nurses as well.

In order to finance this movement funds were raised by the merchants, and employes of factories and the stores, and the towns of the county also sent in funds. The committee listed below had charge of all demonstrations made for the men on leaving:

General committee: R. W. McCreery, chairman; J. B. Northcott, secretary-treasurer; E. A. Franquemont, A. W. Carlson, E. R. Lay, E. H. Draper, B. C. Whitehill, W. C. McCarten and Frank Ryder.

Committee on speakers: C. C. St. Clair, chairman; A. F. Balch and B. F. Cummings.

Committee on parades: B. C. Whitehill, chairman; F. M. Wilbur, A. W. Carlson and A. Palmer.

Committee to secure names of soldiers: H. J. Rodgers, chairman; Leroy Jones, E. A. Franquemont.

Committee on medals: E. H. Draper, chairman; J. Sidney Johnson and J. B. Northcott.

Committee on publicity: H. J. Rodgers, chairman; J. Sidney Johnson and J. B. Northcott.
